
Message from President Jorge Burmeister

The struggle of man against power is a struggle of memory against forgetting (Kundera, 1978/1982:3)

We all know about the social and transcultural potential of Group Psychotherapy and Group Processes. All of us, members and organizational affiliates of IAGP as well as non-members, invest our expertise in the clinical and organizational application of our work around the globe today. One of the ways we can contribute as well to our field is by giving IAGP its own distinct and rightful identity. This has become visible by this wonderful journal Forum - thanks to the editors and the many colleagues publishing their reflections on their work. This issue reflects the progress of our discipline and how this progress has become an advancement of IAGP itself. With my warm regards to all members and non members and with a hope for world peace.
